

Taking part online

We want everybody who would like to take part in the NHS Citizen Bristol Design workshop to have the opportunity to do so - which is why we are running a full suite of social media during the event.

As long as your contributions are pertinent to the subject and don't fall foul of our rules (at the bottom of this document) we'll do our best to try to make sure they are included and responded to where we can. Please, though, bear in mind that we're a small team doing our best to help and sometimes what you say may fall through the cracks.

Please also read the blog post we've written explaining how we're hoping to cover the event and how we're hoping to talk to people during and after the event. Unfortunately we won't get to everyone all of the time, but we'll do our best.

Here's how you can take part...

Twitter: #nhscitizen

There's already a conversation about the event going on using the hashtag #nhscitizen – and you can add your voice to that straight away and during the event. We'll be projecting tweets on this hashtag into the auditorium and we know that lots of people at the event will be looking to use the hashtag themselves.

Discussion forum (Disqus)

You'll also be able to ask questions and make your own suggestions about the event by adding comments to the discussion forum. You will need to log in, giving details of a social media account, to do this.

We will post- moderate this space, so comments will go up automatically, but we reserve the right to remove things that we think that are abusive or might be likely to be defamatory.

Please bear in mind:-

- We're only able to talk about the issues on the Open House agendas. Unfortunately, we can't engage on other subjects on the day so we're sorry if we can't respond or talk about them.
- We are only a very small team so we might sometimes struggle to get back to you straight away – and things might occasionally go wrong. Please be patient, we'll do our very best to help when we can.
- If you are rude, if we think you're not engaging productively with the people joining the conversation, if you're not talking about the subject matter on the agenda, or if anything you say is defamatory or in contravention of other laws we reserve the right to remove what you say and not to respond to you.
